Cheques Save You Time and Trouble

Safety and Convenience
Make Them Best Way to Pay

In the days of barter, our forefathers lugged produce to market and . . . eventually . . . found someone who had what they wanted or wanted what they had. It was a tedious, tiring business.

The introduction of money improved matters. Instead of totting a back-breaking load, the shopper carried only a few coins. Later on, paper money made business even easier.

Then came the cheque. This secure and handy method of payment enabled people to avoid the trouble and risk of carrying too much in pockets or purses. And after a cheque was cashed, it became a receipt, a protection the person who signed it is often glad of.

You can avail yourself of this universal convenience by visiting the local Bank of Montreal branch where Dan Rueler, manager, or any member of his staff will be glad to open an account for you.

Prayer for the New Year

Dear Lord, I ask Thee
For this New Year,
An extra gift of courage
My little trials to bear.
I ask not for success;
For wealth or fame or power;
I ask for added faith
To live life, hour by hour.
Give me kindly thought, Lord,
To use for charity.
I want no gold to give,
I'll spend kind thoughts for Thee.

English New Year

The English New Year celebration was changed from December 25 by William the Conqueror, because he was crowned on January 1.

Traditional New Year's Gifts Were Sacred

The Druids distributed branches of the sacred mistletoe, cut with peculiar ceremonies, as New Year's gifts to the people and the Saxons observed the day with gifts and festivals.

The Roman custom of taking gifts to the emperor was introduced into England as early as the time of Henry III. Queen Elizabeth is supposed to have supplied herself with her jewels and wardrobe almost entirely from these gifts.

As late as 1692 the English nobility were accustomed every year to send to the king a purse containing gold.

Under the Tudors and Stuarts it was the habit of all classes to give presents to friends with the best wishes for the New Year.

Ladies received presents of gloves or pins which were then expensive. Sometimes the gifts were wrapped in money and from this practice we have the term "pin money."

Holiday Stains

An aftermath of holiday dinner parties is very likely to be stained table linen -- cloths, place mats or napkins. Mrs. Vera Macdonald, supervisor of home economics service for the Alberta department of agriculture advises that such stains should be removed as promptly as possible and always before the linens go into the general wash. Many stains are set by the heat and soap of regular laundering.

Cranberry and Other Fruit:

Sponge with cold water first. Stretch fabric over bowl and pour boiling water through stain from 2 to 3 feet above stain. If stain does not come out entirely, try a drop of lemon juice and salt and wash in cold water.

Ice Cream:

First sponge with cold water then with a grease solvent followed with warm soapsuds. If some color remains treat according to its nature.

Candlewax:

Scrape off the surface wax, then sponge with a grease solvent. Let dry then wash in soapy water.

Coffee with Cream:

Wash first in cold water to remove milk then pour boiling water from a height through stains. Wash in soapy water. If stain remains use a mild bleach.

Directions for removing other stains may be obtained by writing to the Home Economics Service, Alberta Department of Agriculture, Edmonton.

A Rural Housing Project

THE NEED FOR IMPROVING HOUSING, educational and recreational facilities in rural communities in Western Canada has long been recognized, since in none of these respects does the average farmer enjoy the advantages offered to those who live in towns and cities. The fact that living conditions in urban communities are more attractive has rightly been assumed to be the cause of many enterprising young people leaving the farms and seeking work in urban centres where they can have more modern homes, send their children to larger schools, and enjoy wider cultural and recreational advantages. It is generally agreed that it is most unjust that farmers, who contribute so much to the well being of the entire country, should not live and work in surroundings as attractive as those in the larger towns and cities. This matter has received the attention of governments, agricultural organizations and other interested bodies for many years, and in numerous farm communities great improvements have been made in educational facilities and in providing recreational and cultural opportunities for residents of all age groups.

Standards To Be Improved

It appears now that constructive action is being taken to raise the standards for farm homes in Western Canada. In this connection it has recently been announced that under the Prairie Rural Housing Committee, which includes representatives of the Federal Department of Agriculture and the Central Housing and Mortgage Corporation, research will be done on improving housing conditions for Western Canadian farm families. Research teams from the Universities of Saskatchewan, Alberta and Manitoba are now studying such problems as water and heating systems, methods of sewage disposal, and construction materials and costs. At the University of Manitoba work is being carried on in connection with the planning and design of farm homes, farm kitchens, and community centres to meet the needs of rural districts. Farm men and women are being consulted for suggestions and ideas in connection with these studies and it is reported that keen interest is being shown in the planning of homes provided with equipment, storage space and other facilities which will lighten the work of the farm family and give more pleasant surroundings in which to live.

Study Needs Of Western Farms

Professor J. A. Russell, director of the School of Architecture and Fine Arts at the University of Manitoba announced recently that the budget allocated for the entire project in the year ending March 31st, 1948, is $33,825. It has been arranged that each Western province will bear about 15 per cent. of this expenditure, while the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation will pay the remaining 55 per cent. It is expected that the project will not be completed for two years, but interim plans will be made available to farmers to meet what is termed a "tremendous need". As is the case with all types of housing in Canada at the present time, there has been a minimum of construction of farm homes during the past few years due to the critical shortage of labor and materials. By the time it is possible for any extensive building program to be undertaken in rural districts it appears that plans will be available for homes suitable to the needs of the Western farmer, and that no longer will prairie farm homes be built from plans more suited to city houses or to eastern Canadian farms.

AIR ESCAPE AT FIVE HUNDRED M.P.H.

An employee of a United Kingdom aircraft firm recently made a successful descent from a jet fighter flying at over 500 m.p.h. This is the highest speed at which anyone has ever been ejected from a plane. The object of the descent was to test new apparatus invented by the head of a United Kingdom aircraft firm.

FIRST CANADIAN MOTHER VISITS DUTCH CEMETERY

WINNIPEG. — Believed to be the first Canadian mother to visit cemeteries at Nijmegen, Holland, and Adegmen, Belgium, Mrs. W. R. Dilworth of Pincher Creek, Alta., is visiting relatives here en route back to her home.

She found the pilgrimage far from lonely and she said that people she had met on the trip had been unable to do enough for her.

Added Mrs. Dilworth: "I can tell every Canadian mother who lost a son how pleasant the stretches of green grass are, with flowers and bushes between the graves. Each metal cross is painted white, and bears the boy's name and identification number."

First bereavement came for Mrs. Dilworth, September 13, 1944, when her son, James Robert, 27, was killed. Herman Clifton, 25, another son, was killed the following December 12.

"I feel a whole lot better. I can go home now and be more contented."

Black found the missus irate when he came home after sowing four pounds of dry ice in clouds at a 17,000-foot altitude.

He said subsequent showers fell for 20 minutes in a square-mile residential area, including the Black backyard as flutter with drying clothes.

Chili Restricts Luxury Exports From Canada

MONTREAL. — Mariano Bustos, Chilean consul-general here, announced that because of shrinking dollar reserves his country is imposing temporary prohibition on a wide range of "luxury" imports from Canada. The restrictive decree will expire Dec. 31.

Among products and manufactures affected by the decree are industrial, commercial and domestic refrigerators, gas and electric heaters, pottery, glassware, lumber, hunting and fishing equipment, some textiles, domestic radios, builders' hardware, plumbing supplies, cutlery, flour-milling machinery, footwear, dyes, perfumes and toothpaste.

Heavy machinery, agricultural implements, newsprint, rubber and chemical products are not affected by the decree, Mr. Bustos said.

The leader of the party visiting a mental institution went up to a group of inmates standing near the gate. Quietly he addressed one of them.

"Why are you all here, my good man?"

The other grinned, pointed to the party, and gave the simple reply: "Because we're not all there."

Poetic Rover (to farmer) "And does this glorious setting sun mean nothing to you?"

Farmer (mopping his brow): "I'll say it does. It means I can eventually unhitch the horses and go home."

After going about three miles the motorist who had given an old lady a lift on the country road asked: "And where did you say you were going?"

"Well," she said, "to tell you the truth, I was going in the opposite direction, only I didn't like to hurt your feelings when you were so kind as to offer me a ride."

The five-year-old evacuee was given an egg for breakfast on his first morning on the farm. He took some in his spoon, sniffed at it several times, looked up in surprise, and exclaimed: "Coo, what a funny egg; it don't smell."

Murphy: "Have ye seen Pat lately?"

Mike: "Faith, yes, I thought I saw him on the other side of the road yesterday, and he thought he saw me, but, begorra, when we got up to one another it was neither of us."

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY—

THE LILAC TREE

By RUTH THOMPSON

VIC strode ahead into the depot with his suitcase and Mary's grey tweed bag. Last night this had seemed such a perfect idea. Vic and she were dancing when he suggested it.

"We can be married right away over the line — no waiting around. Don't fuss about a lot of clothes" he had said. "Just wait. I'll dress you like a doll."

The first time he said that, Mary felt tingly from head to toe. She hated her job in the noisy restaurant. Every day the trays seemed heavier and clumsier to manage. Vic's cheery flirting at the counter had been a welcome diversion.

Vic set the bags down beside a long empty bench and she watched him hurry to the ticket-window. How queer, she thought, just two years ago, when she left Pine Creek—it was April then, too—she had entered the city through this same station. Two years of disillusionment! Although it now seemed like an eternity ago, she could still see Mom's tear-filled eyes.

"Aw, mom, you know I love you," Mary had said then. "Gee, Mom, you're swell. Roger, too. But, after all, I don't want to settle down and be a farmer's wife. I want to go dancing and see good shows and have fun."

Then the local train puffed in. As Mary reached for her luggage Mom grabbed her and held her tight in her arms.

"Don't you worry about me now, Mom. I'll write."

Then Mom had tucked a spray of purple lilac in the strap of the suitcase—"So you'll not be forgetting the lilac tree."

Mary smiled. She was remembering how she had called even the tiniest shrub a lilac-tree. Someone came and sat close to her. Vic, it was, with the tickets in his hand. "What are you grinning about?" he asked. "Oh, nothing," she answered. "I was just remembering." She wouldn't try to explain. He would never understand.

He let it go at that. He laid his arm across her shoulders, drew her close, while his pudgy fingers kept squeezing her arm. His lips almost touched hers.

"Kiss me, Baby," he urged, with a possessive glint in his steely blue eyes. Mary shrank back. How bloated his face looked in daylight. Strange that never before had she realized the fullness of his lips. She pushed him back with a quiver of uneasiness—why, this was the man she had promised to marry.

Oh, not here, Vic," she pleaded. "Not afraid of me, are you? Better not be!" His voice sounded sarcastic—or was that a threat?

Mary turned her face away, trying to ignore him. She noticed a woman who had entered the depot. The woman carried an armful of hauntingly sweet lilacs. She brushed past Mary. One spray fell near her.

"Vic," she said, touching his coat sleeve. "Pick up that lilac for me, won't you?"

He looked at her in amazement, then kicked it away contemptuously.

"You're crazy. That weed! Why would you want that?" he asked. "Just you wait. I'll get you roses, a roomful of red roses."

She reached and picked up the bruised flower. Its fragrance lingered. She was silent so long that Vic spoke impatiently.

"What's wrong? You're not like my girl at all this morning. That silly old flower—not sore about it, are you?"

Mary did not answer. She was seeing lilac-trees, purple and white, all in bloom back home. She could almost smell their sweetness. Vic swore under his breath. Startled, Mary turned to him. A swarthy man, with hat pulled low, was approaching them. His face was vaguely familiar.

"Who is he, Vic?" Mary whispered, as she tried to recollect where or if she had met him. Vic paid no attention to her. Instead he spoke sharply to the man.

"What's the big idea, following me here? Didn't I tell everyone to lay low? I meant it. Mary and me are going away to—going away to be hitched."

Mary noticed uneasily how he hesitated as he spoke. The stranger's eyes shifted to Mary. She caught a glimpse of a scar high on one cheek, of shifty, dark eyes.

Something clicked. That picture in last night's paper. The column about another hold-up. Mary shivered—like when someone dropped a lump of snow down her back when she was a kid.

Then—"It's like this, boss—" He was whispering something in Vic's ear. "Boss". Startled, Mary tried to listen closer.

Vic swore again. His voice was harsh. "No!" he shouted.

Mary shivered. She looked around, hoping no one heard him.

"Listen, Baby," he said, turning to her. "I've got some business, some mighty important business to tend to. You wait here. I'll be back, pronto."

Mary watched them step into a large flashy car. At first she was frightened. Then there was no feeling in her body but a queer numbness. Only her brain stirred. It was clearing, like a mist rising after sunrise.

As if looking into a kaleidoscope, all the separate pieces slipped into a pattern, no longer rose-colored—now something brown and drab and ugly.

She thought of Vic's promises. Beautiful clothes, night clubs, a gay party somewhere every night. She thought of Mom, darling Mom, and of quiet, trustworthy Roger still waiting for her to change her mind and come back to him. She hesitated. People hurried in and out of the station. Mary looked at her wrist-watch and wondered if the morning milk-train still ran to Pine Creek. She went to the station door and looked down the street. Vic would be back any minute now.

Suddenly she grabbed up her grey tweed bag and almost ran to the ticket window. There were only two ahead of her. Breathlessly she asked the agent about the train to Pine Creek.

"Yes, Ma'am! In three minutes, better hurry," he said as he stamped her ticket.

Clutching the bit of paper in her fingers when he handed it to her, all of a sudden she felt as if she had been running through a dark, dense forest and had that minute stepped out into the warm clean sunlight.

Newfoundland Strategic Air Base In Wars

MONTREAL. — Newfoundland will occupy a strategic military position in wars to come as it will serve as a main interceptor base against air attacks on the North American continent.

This was the forecast made by Lieut.-Col. A. T. Howell, O.B.E., formerly in charge of the Newfoundland Regiment for four years, in an address before the Lions Club here.

The real Newfoundland is practically unknown to the majority of Canadians and less known to residents of the United States, the speaker said. Many know that this country is located somewhere at the entrance of the Gulf of St. Lawrence. They know it is cold and damp. But that is the extent of their knowledge of this huge island covering about 400,000 square miles.

"We must not forget that Newfoundland is important to Canada and to the United States from a military viewpoint. This advantage is not realized by the average person. Any future war will be fought in the air and Newfoundland will become a main interceptor basis on the North American continent. Any attacks on the U.S. and Canada can be intercepted by planes from Newfoundland."

Lieut.-Col. Howell remarked: "If Confederation ever includes Newfoundland, I hope that the Canadian Government, realizing the problems of the country, will endeavor to raise its standards of living and provide adequate social services."

NEVER A CHORE

Psychological gratifications derived from pleasurable meals are as important to health as are the vitamins and minerals essential to our diet. This means eating should not be allowed to become a chore, nor a race against time, say nutritionists.

Michigan Has Good Word For Canada

The Flint, (Michigan) Journal has this to say: In Canada women drivers do not take advantage of men drivers because of sex, nor do you see old "jalopies" filled with speed-crazy "teen-agers" who dash about endangering the lives of pedestrians and other motorists. The police do not snarl at you from the corner of their mouth when asked a question, but are very courteous and kind to visitors as are the people also. If you want to meet kindly, friendly people and a bright sunny land, then spend your vacation in Canada.

President's Reception

It has been the custom from the beginning of the Republic for the President of the United States to welcome the New Year by holding a reception open to the general public.

On the first New Year's day after his inauguration President Washington opened his home to receive the people. Throughout the seven years which Washington lived in Philadelphia as the capital of the nation, he continued this custom.

of the season to all her Bei-

a short play opened the evening.
Each member was presented with a gift and the evening closed with games and a delicious lunch was served by the executive.
